

I feel strongly that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. My dinners and naps are no longer interrupted by totally inappropriate solicitations (eg. window replacement offers for an apartment dweller). Our times have never needed less agitation. Our homes lack much needed quiet time. The phone is for MY convenience. I am 100% cellular now and do not want my limited minutes wasted on unwanted calls. Indiana's law has been very effective in reducing calls that are a waste of time for all involved (I never honor telephone solicitations on principle). Thank you for protecting the privacy of home. Would-be intruders can spend the money of a postage stamp (USPS can use the business).
